

Guest Editorials for the Coming Year

One of the things that we have tried to do with the journal is to create new innovations each year.

The addition of things like the Fellows' Forum, the educational forum, special review articles, and state of the art articles have all come about as a result of our attempts to make the journal new and interesting each year.

This year for the first time, I am going to ask colleagues from around the country to do a guest editorial. Over the last number of years, I have had the privilege of doing an editorial for each issue. With so many outstanding colleagues in our field, I thought it would be appropriate this year to begin requesting colleagues from around the country to write an editorial on any subject that they would see fit to do for the journal. I will obviously look at those editorials for some editorial evaluation but, for the most part, the authors will be able to say and write what they want, on whatever subject they choose.

Because we have so many great distinguished colleagues around the country with such a great knowledge base, these editorials will serve to diversify and improve the quality of the academic content within the journal itself. I am very excited to launch this new effort this next year, and I hope you look forward to seeing outstanding editorials produced by colleagues from around the country and around the world. It is a new year with a new innovation which I hope you will enjoy and continue to improve the quality of the journal.

Douglas S. Moodie, MD, MS

Associate Chief of Cardiology

Texas Children's Hospital

Professor of Pediatrics, Baylor College of Medicine

6621 Fannin Street MC, 19345-C

Houston, Texas 77030, USA